REVIEWS-WHAT TO USE

HIGH END BRANDS

DIOR

Review

Dior is a chic, high-quality brand that Sells a variety of products, ranging from make-up to bags. I personally love this brand because all of their products have immaculate quality and are definitely worth the price! My favourite product is their internet sensation lip oil which is frequently sold out online and in many stores. I 100% recommend this brand to anyone who has the money to spend.

PRADA

Prada is another glamorous, classy fashion brand that is loved all around the world. I think that this brand is an excellent choice for any aspiring bag and clothes collectors. However, that is also their demise as they aren't very well-rounded. Prada are mostly known for their bags but also sell watches and clothes, but that's it. I love their new Spring Summer 2023 collection because it is has something for everyone! It's a summer essential!

WAS THE MET GALA THEME SUITABLE?

The Met Gala is an iconic event recognised worldwide for its fashion, it has always sought out to celebrate groundbreaking creativity and innovative figures. However, the decision of choosing Karl Lagerfeld as this year's Met Gala topic required careful consideration. Lagerfeld's controversial reputation and questionable actions raise significant concerns about how suitable he is as a theme for such a prestigious event.

Karl Lagerfeld's legacy is full of instances of offensive remarks and a lack of sensitivity towards marginalised communities. His thoughtless comments have undervalued various groups, creating harmful stereotypes and fostering an environment of exclusion rather than inclusivity. Examples of how Karl Lagerfeld lacked sensitivity include: him being notoriously fatphobic, anti-immigrant and misogynistic. By honouring Karl Lagerfeld at the Met Gala, we risk legitimising his offensive behaviour - saying that it's ok to act like this when it isn't as well as undermining the event's potential to inspire positive changes and to promote diversity.

Lagerfeld's controversial history extends beyond his offensive remarks. His involvement in the use of fur in fashion has been widely criticised by animal rights activists and ethical consumers. The Met Gala, as an influential platform, should be striving to showcase designers and artists who prioritise ethical practices, sustainable materials, and an understanding approach to creation of clothing. Celebrating Lagerfeld would send a conflicting message, agreeing with a figure whose choices contradict these principles.

While Karl Lagerfeld undoubtedly left a mark on the fashion industry, his vision often catered to a limited demographic, reinforcing the idea of exclusivity rather than genuine representation. The Met Gala has the potential to honour individuals who have created more diversity and shattered boundaries, to make fashion more accessible and reflective of the diversity of society. Lagerfeld's legacy falls short in this aspect, as his work predominantly appeals to an elite few, neglecting the experiences and voices of a broader audience.

Choosing Lagerfeld as a focal point for the Met Gala risks overshadowing the contributions of other visionary designers who have reshaped the fashion industry in many remarkable ways. The event should aim to celebrate those who have challenged stereotypical ideas, embraced inclusivity, and used their platform to fight for a positive change. By focusing on Lagerfeld, we neglect the opportunity to uplift figures who have fostered innovation and brought about large shifts in the industry.

To conclude, the decision of Karl Lagerfeld as the topic for the Met Gala needs reconsideration because of his controversial legacy. The event should be a beacon of inspiration, celebrating individuals who have positively impacted the fashion world while embodying values of inclusivity, ethics, and cultural representation. By steering away from Lagerfeld, the Met Gala can spotlight artists and designers who have broken barriers and championed transformative ideals, fostering a more progressive and meaningful dialogue within the fashion industry. The Met Gala needs to use its platform to uplift those who truly embody its spirit, which will leave a lasting positive impact on both fashion and society.

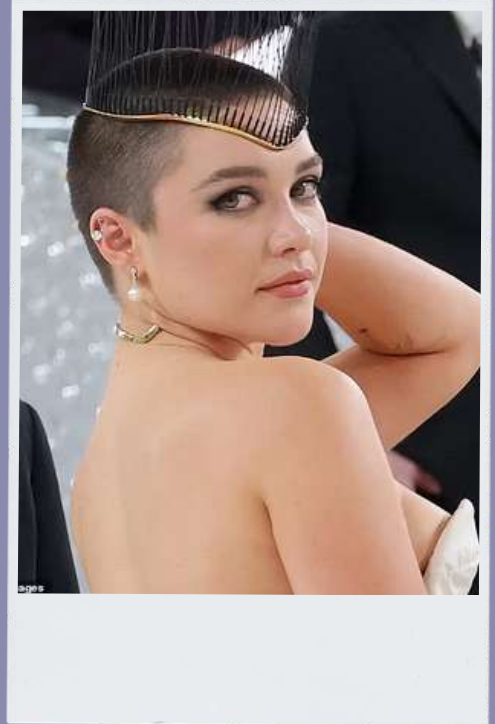

After all of this, would you still want Karl Lagerfeld to be the Met Gala theme?

Send your problems to Advisable
Avery

Dear Advisable Avery,
I don't know what to do - my stylist, Jackie, is one of the people I'm closest to. However, for the upcoming Met Gala, she wants me to shave my head! I mean what should I do? I can't shave my head; I've been growing out my hair for years! I've offered to wear a bald cap but nothing works. She's insistent! The Met Gala is getting sooner rapidly and my whole outfit is ordered: I love it! I shouldn't have to fire her, right? Please help me, I'm clueless on what to do!

Yours sincerely,
Bald Becky

Dearest Becky,
I truly understand your struggles and why you may be reluctant to do such a thing! Why would she want you to be bald?! I'm sure that most people reading wouldn't want to go bald, especially when they have been growing out their hair. I see that you have offered to wear a bald cap (you know your fashion tricks), however Jackie is insistent on you shaving your head. In this situation, I would suggest that you should ask Jackie what the difference would be in your look if you were to wear a bald cap rather than shaving your head and why she is so insistent on you shaving your head. Alternatively, if Jackie does manage to point out why it would be better for you to shave your head than wear a bald cap. I would tell you to try to reach out and ask her to herself in your shoes so that she can see your point of view. Finally, you could ask other stylists for their suggestions, I'm sure they've been in similar situations .

Good luck with your wardrobe worries!
Yours sincerely,
Advisable Avery

Send your problems to Advisable
Avery

Dear Advisable Avery,

OH MY GOSH. I have no idea what to do. My shoes don't match my dress!. I know, it's such a tragedy. I mean, I already know you're shedding a tear for me, who wouldn't? I'm perfect, or at least I was before my shoes came. Who could be so inconsiderate to literally mess up such an easy online order. I only ordered a couple things: my fuschia shoes, of course, a silhouetted skirt with intricate lacing details, 24 karat gold earrings with dazzling diamonds from Botswana (gorgeous country, by the way) and a simple whale-bone corset dress! Who could get that wrong?

I ordered them quite recently, a couple weeks at most, and I know for sure that I ordered FUSCHIA shoes, not this magenta colour that they've come in. I mean, who do they think they are, sending me the wrong colour shoes. It's so doltish! The Met Gala is in a few days now, so I can't return them. I have to look spectacular, perfect, flawless, impeccable, I'm making a special appearance, it's not everyday that a model like me has time for events. I'm always travelling to gracious countries with stunning landmarks and natural geography...

Anyway, back to the problem at hand. MY STUPID, UGLY SHOES. I'm an international model, I just have to look my best. Oh Avery, what should I do? Please help me.

Yours sincerely,
Model Michelle

Dear Model Michelle,

I sympathise with you wanting to look your best for the Met Gala, it is one of the most prestigious fashion events worldwide, with millions of fans watching. However, I think that you are slightly overreacting. I suggest that you should contact the company you bought the shoes from. Maybe they made a mistake? Your shoes may have been misplaced, and you got sent other shoes. I'm sure it is just one big misunderstanding. I recommend you contact the company, you could get your money back, or even a new pair of shoes that match your dress! Or, you could buy shoes from another company that will give you the fuschia shoes you wanted. I'm sure there are plenty of other companies that have your desired shoes!

Good luck with your wardrobe worries!

Yours sincerely,
Advisable Avery

It's a huge party where many famous people from the worlds of fashion, music, and movies gather together to show off their stylish outfits. This article provides insight into the Met Gala; including the types of people invited, the benefits it brings, and a balanced view of the event.

Who Gets Invited and Why (and Why Not):

The guest list for the Met Gala is highly exclusive - with invitations extended to A-list celebrities, renowned designers, and influential figures. Those invited are usually well-known in their respective fields and have made significant contributions to the world of fashion or entertainment. The event organisers carefully curate the guest list to ensure a mix of stars, fashion icons, and influential personalities who can bring attention and a large amount of prestige to the event.

However, it's important to note that not everyone gets invited to the Met Gala. Many aspiring artists and up-and-coming designers may not have the opportunity to attend. The exclusivity of the event can be seen as a drawback, as it may limit access for those who are trying to make a name for themselves in the industry. Nonetheless, the Met Gala remains a highly sought-after event, and being invited is considered a significant achievement in the fashion world.

The Benefits of the Met Gala:

The Met Gala offers several benefits to its attendees and the fashion industry as a whole. Moreover, the Gala acts as a fundraising event, supporting the Costume Institute at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The funds raised contribute to organising exhibitions, acquiring costumes, and preserving the rich history and artistry of fashion.

To conclude, while the Met Gala's exclusivity may limit opportunities for emerging talents, it remains a highly regarded and influential event. The gathering of fashion icons, celebrities, and influential figures showcases the power of fashion as an art form. The event's impact on trends and popular culture, along with its fundraising efforts, solidify the Met Gala's significance in the fashion world.
